The GISF Podcast

Exploring the latest opportunities and challenges for security risk management

 New season to be released in February 2023

Spotlight

The GISF Podcast

On the GISF podcast, we speak with security risk management professionals and a range of other experts about the most significant challenges to aid worker security and the latest debates and innovations enabling safe and sustainable support for crisis-affected communities. With series focusing on humanitarian incidents, compounding crises, and inclusive SRM, listeners can hear from the most dynamic voices across the sector.

This year, we'll be launching our next podcast series: 'Evolving SRM', which looks at the innovations, transformative developments, and dynamic trends facing the sector and aid worker security. Listen to our previous series now, and stay tuned for our latest episodes, coming soon!

What is Risk? NGO perspectives and implications for aid worker security

by Lasse Lampinen

How does the way organisations define 'risk' impact their management of the security risks faced by aid workers?

In our latest blog, Lasse Lampinen argues that more work is needed to define what 'risk' means in the NGO sector, and explores the potential impact that differing understandings may have for partnerships, security training, funding, and, inevitably, staff safety.

Where Are We Now? New Keeping Up With COVID-19 Module

The impact of COVID-19 continues to be felt across the globe. The latest instalment in our 'Keeping Up With COVID-19' series looks at how the pandemic is impacting NGO security practices and policies, exploring changes to travel management, the need to enable localisation processes, improvements in work/life balance, and the value of communication tools in mitigating COVID-19's impact.
